(PPD), Banda Aceh, 2009, 185 pages. The data in this study were collected by documentation technique. Data were analyzed by following some steps, namely, (1) reading and understanding the texts of the peaceful-nuanced folklore of Aceh, (2) marking each part of the text, (3) determining the values of character, (4) discussing the values of each character based on the values of the group respectively, and (5) making conclusion by using the language of the researcher. The character values in relation to God (religious) include, (a) thought, (b) utterance, (c) and actions. The character values in relation to oneself include (a) honesty, (b) responsibility, (c) discipline, (d) hard work, (e) confidence, (f) entrepreneurship, (g) logical, critical, creative and innovative thinking, (h) independence, (i) curiosity and (j) interest in science. The character values in relation to others include (a) aware of the rights and obligations to self and others, (b) appreciate the work and achievements of others, (c) polite, (d) democratic. The character values in relation to the environment. The values of nationality include (a) nationalism, (b) respecting diversity. Character values in the collection of peaceful-nuanced folklore of Aceh were delivered in two ways: direct and indirect way. (1) The direct way comprises of two ways, namely, (a) through the description of the author and, (b) through the characters. (2) The indirect way of character values delivery also has two ways, namely, (a) through events and, (b) through conflict.
